Archbp. Vigneron: Catholics who push same-sex marriage should not receive Communion

Posted on 8 April 2013 by Fr. John Zuhlsdorf

<http://wdtprs.com/blog/>

A regular commentator here, the distinguished canonist Ed Peters was quoted in an interesting article in the Detroit Free Press. In the article, Archbishop Vigneron made a clear statement about receiving Holy Communion if you advocate same-sex marriage. Fr. Z (as Fr. Zuhlsdorf is known by) highlighted parts of the article. His comments are in brackets.

I met Fr. Z when I was in the seminary on Spring Break in 1999 at St. Agnes parish in Minneapolis/St. Paul. He was a student of Cardinal Ratzinger/Benedict XVI and was assigned to the Ecclesia Dei Commission by John Paul II. He is a convert from Lutheranism and a student of the Sacred Liturgy and Latin. I saw him in Rome in 2000. We happened to be in Tulsa at the same conference back in January. I had a pleasant dinner with him and two other priests the last night of the conference.

As one reads this article, one can see the inerrant bias in the reporter for the Detroit Free Press, Niraj Warikoo (contact information is: nwarikoo@freepress.com or 313-223-4792), who selects Fr. Thomas Reese, S.J. Fr. Reese was the editor of America Magazine, but was such a dissenter that he was asked to be replaced by the Vatican.

The reporter plays the “fair and balanced view” by getting a typical liberal/dissenter to quote to try to undermine the authority of the archbishop and the canon lawyer. Instead of seeking the truth about the Catholic Church and what She teaches, the reporter tries to “seek both sides of the issue.” This is disingenuous, because there are not two sides to these issues. They are non-negotiable. But if reporters like this continue to play this game, they think they can influence the Church through polls and public opinion.

When I was at John Carroll University, I wrote two articles for the Carroll News. The editors understood their role and the role of the reporter. They also understood opinion pieces and labeled them as such. One of the articles that I wrote was simply reporting the facts. The other was to investigate both sides of an issue and draw my own personal opinion. The Carroll News Staff not only understand this principle, but also made sure that it was understood in each article. It is sad to see the decline of the News Industry, especially Print, but worse it is frustrating. See the next day’s article posted by Fr. Z on CNN’s spin tactics.

Too often, Catholics get their Catechism from the Media (both the left and the right) and quite often it doesn’t reflect the teaching of the Church. Therefore, we need to be diligent in checking the sources of what the Media puts out. Plus, we need to support Catholic Radio by listening to them, supporting them financially, and patronizing their supporters. Catholic Radio does its best to provide us with the most accurate news regarding the Church, whether it be events in the news to Her teaching. The Sunrise Morning Show and Catholic Connection in the morning and Kresta in the Afternoon are good examples of Catholics who were in the Secular Media now using their gifts to bring us the best reporting on the Church today.

Detroit-area Catholic leaders urge gay marriage supporters to skip Communion

(<http://www.freep.com/article/20130408/NEWS05/304080041/Detroit-area-Catholic-leaders-urge-gay-marriage-supporters-to-skip-Communion>).

A Detroit professor and legal adviser to the Vatican says Catholics who promote gay marriage should not try to receive holy Communion, a key part of Catholic identity.

And the archbishop of Detroit, Allen Vigneron, said Sunday that Catholics who receive Communion while advocating gay marriage would “logically bring shame for a double-dealing that is not unlike perjury.” [Let’s use the other word: lie.]

The comments of Vigneron and Edward Peters, who teaches Catholic canon law at Sacred Heart Major Seminary in Detroit, are [Get this...] part of a polarizing discussion about gay marriage that echoes debate over whether politicians who advocate abortion rights should receive Communion. [I’d say the conclusion is obvious.]

In a post on his blog last week, Peters said that Catholic teachings make it clear that marriage is between one man and one woman. And so, “Catholics who promote ‘same-sex marriage’ act contrary to” Catholic law “and should not approach for holy Communion,” he wrote. “They also risk having holy Communion withheld from them ... being rebuked and/or being sanctioned.”

Peters didn’t specify a Catholic politician or public figure in his post. But he told the Free Press that a person’s “public efforts to change society’s definition of marriage ... amount to committing objectively wrong actions.” [The key here is “public”. If you are out there as an activist in the public eye or a politician, and you are Catholic, and you are promoting or supporting things that are contrary to the laws of nature, God and His Church, then you must not approach for Communion and the proper ministers of Communion should deny it.]

Peters, an attorney and the Edmund Cardinal Szoka chairman at Sacred Heart, was appointed by Pope Benedict XVI in 2010 to be a referendary of the Apostolic Sinatura, which means he helps advise the top judicial authority in the Catholic Church. Peters’ blog, “In Light of the Law,” is popular among Catholic experts, but not everyone agrees with his traditional views. [Who would they be? Liberals, open advocates of sodomy, progressivists, etc.]

“Most American bishops do not favor denying either politicians or voters Communion because of their positions on controversial issues,” said Thomas Reese, [Iupus in fabula] a Catholic priest and senior fellow at the Woodstock Theological Center at Georgetown University. Reese said that Peters’ views are “in a minority among American canon lawyers.” [gratis asseritur, gratis negatur]

But, Reese added, “about 30 or so bishops have said that pro-choice or pro-gay-marriage Catholics should not present themselves for Communion.” [All that means is that 30 or so bishops have a backbone.]

Peters has said before that liberal Catholic Democrats, such as U.S. Rep. Nancy Pelosi of California and New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo, should be denied Communion because of their statements and positions.

In 2011, Peters said that Cuomo should not receive Communion because he is an outspoken proponent of gay marriage. Last month, Peters said, “Pelosi suffers from one of the most malformed consciences in the annals of American Catholic politics or ... she is simply hell-bent on using her Catholic identity to attack Catholic values at pretty much every opportunity.” [Sounds about right.]

In 2002, Catholic Jennifer Granholm's support of abortion rights became an issue in the gubernatorial race a month before the election, when Detroit Cardinal Adam Maida released a letter saying Catholic politicians had a "special moral obligation" to oppose abortion.

Last month, Vigneron said at a news conference that maintaining views that oppose abortion and support traditional marriage are important for Catholics.

"Were we to abandon them, we would be like physicians who didn't tell their patients that certain forms of behavior are not really in their best interest," said Vigneron, who oversees 1.3 million Catholics in southeastern Michigan. [If a doctor must tell a patient that certain things are detrimental, how much more ought a priest or bishop give warnings are spiritual harm? The former cares for the body, which inevitably passes. The later cares for the soul, which is eternal.]

On Sunday, Vigneron said about supporting gay marriage and receiving Communion: "For a Catholic to receive holy Communion and still deny the revelation Christ entrusted to the church is to try to say two contradictory things at once: 'I believe the church offers the saving truth of Jesus, and I reject what the church teaches.' In effect, they would contradict themselves. This sort of behavior would result in publicly renouncing one's integrity and logically bring shame for a double-dealing that is not unlike perjury."

Vigneron said the church wants to help Catholics "avoid this personal disaster."

Fr Z kudos to Archbishop Vigneron.

Hopefully other bishops will take heart at his example and make strong public statements such as this one. Now we need some action as well. Speaking up is an action, but there are other actions as well.

CNN insinuates that Archbp. Vigneron "dialed back" his words about promoters of same-sex marriage and Holy Communion

Posted on 9 April 2013 by Fr. John Zuhlsdorf

<http://wdtprs.com/blog/2013/04/cnn-insinuates-that-archbp-vigneron-dialed-back-his-words-about-promoters-of-same-sex-marriage-and-holy-communion/>

There is a deeply flawed, perhaps even mendacious, piece on CNN about Archbishop Vigneron's comments about Catholics who promote same-sex marriage and reception of Holy Communion. The CNN article suggests, implies, hints, that the Archdiocese of Detroit is now trying to "step back" from or "dial back" what Vigneron said, by "adding content".

The problem with CNN's claim is that, well, it's wrong. The Archdiocese, by adding content, didn't "step back" at all.

Here is the little of the CNN piece with my (Fr. Z's) emphases and comments.

Detroit archdiocese dials back no Communion for same-sex marriage supporters [There's the "dial back"']

No communion for gay marriage supporters? Archdiocese tries to reframe comments

By Dan Merica, CNN April 8th, 2013

<http://religion.blogs.cnn.com/2013/04/08/detroit-archdiocese-dials-back-no-communion-for-same-sex-marriage-supporters/>

Washington (CNN) – The Archdiocese of Detroit tried to reframe a day-old statement by Archbishop Allen Vigneron that compared Catholics who advocate for same-sex marriage and receive Communion to people committing perjury.

After an academic with ties to the church [Pretty dismissive, no? The "academis" is Ed Peters.] wrote in a blog post that Catholics who advocate same-sex marriage should not receive Communion, Vigneron told the Detroit Free Press on Sunday that Catholics who support same-sex marriage and receive Communion would "logically bring shame for a double-dealing that is not unlike perjury."

"For a Catholic to receive Holy Communion and still deny the revelation Christ entrusted to the church is to try to say two contradictory things at once: 'I believe the church offers the saving truth of Jesus, and I reject what the church teaches,' " Vigneron told the paper. "In effect, they would contradict themselves."

On Monday, the archdiocese looked to step back and add context to the statement. [The implication, together with that "reframe" and "dial back" is that Archbp. Vigneron is changing his mind, saying something different. That's not true.]

"The archbishop's focal point here is not 'gay marriage'; it is a Catholic's reception of Holy Communion," Joe Kohn, the archdiocese spokesman, wrote in an e-mail to CNN. [Uh huh. Fine. The issue of legalization of same-sex marriage isn't the Archbishop's focus in his statement. His focus is the state of the soul of the people who push for it. Going on...] "If a Catholic publicly opposes the church on a serious matter of the church's teaching, any serious matter – for example, whether it be a rejection of the divinity of Christ, racist beliefs, support for abortion or support for redefining marriage – that would contradict the public affirmation they would make of the church's beliefs by receiving Communion." [I don't see a "dialing back" there, do you?]

Kohn continued: "As the archbishop states, the pastors of the church are ready to assist Catholics to help them understand and avoid this conflict." [Was the "dialing back" in part of the email that the writer chose not to share?]

[... some of the back story, which I will cut out...]

A majority of Catholics, according to polling, disagree with this view of Communion. [And now CNN tries to show how backward and out of step Vigneron is with the "majority". Hopefully he'll start listening to the Voz del Pueblo pretty soon and really "dial back" his medieval views.]

A 2011 survey by the National Catholic Reporter [ROFL!] found that 86% of Catholics said they believe a Catholic "can disagree with aspects of church teachings and still remain loyal to the church." [I love this... CNN is pitting Archbp. Vigneron against the Fishwrap.]

The same survey found that 35% of Catholics said the church's opinion on same-sex marriage was very important, a number that reporter William D'Antonio says is lower in previous years.

"What more and more Catholics are saying," D'Antonio wrote in 2011, "is that my lived experiences are different than what the church is saying."

[And that is where the article ends.] This is biased reporting, if it is reporting at all.

World Day of Prayer for Vocations - April 21, 2013

The purpose of the World Day of Prayer for Vocations is to publicly fulfill the Lord's instruction to, "Pray the Lord of the harvest to send laborers into his harvest" (Mt 9:38; Lk 10:2).

As a climax to a prayer that is continually offered throughout the Church, it affirms the primacy of faith and grace in all that concerns vocations to the priesthood and to the consecrated life.

While appreciating all vocations, the Church concentrates its attention this day on vocations to the ordained ministries (priesthood and diaconate), to the Religious life in all its forms (male and female, contemplative and apostolic), to societies of apostolic life, to secular institutes in their diversity of services and membership, and to the missionary life, in the particular sense of mission "ad gentes".
